Was Galatian Really Celtic?

For many people this short remark is the linchpin of a belief that ancient Celtic speech spread far outside its Atlantic-fringe homeland, reaching even into the heart of Anatolia, modern Turkey However, we wish to challenge the idea that Galatians spoke a language that was Celtic in the modern sense of being closely related to Welsh or Irish

Were Celtic identities constructed by archaeologists..?

Were Celtic identities constructed by archaeologists? Tacitus (1970:62), an eye witness to the Pre- Roman Britons, wrote a non-judgmental analysis of the pre-historic inhabitants saying "it seems likely that Gauls settled in the island lying so close to their shores" and that the peoples had similar language, religious beliefs and courage
